About the Journal

The goal of Research & Practice in Assessment is to serve the assessment community as a research journal focusing on student learning outcomes in higher education. The journal originated from the Board of the Virginia Assessment Group (VAG). VAG is the oldest, continuing professional higher education assessment organization in the United States. Dr. Robin Anderson (formerly with Blue Ridge Community College and currently with James Madison University) ushered in the inaugural issue as editor in 2006. The review process is peer blind review and approximately 50% of submissions are accepted. This journal is published twice a year.
